"A good supply chain strategy will bring disparate operations and entities into unison, and deal with the 'white noise' that exists between supply chain nodes. And it stands to reason that through careful choreography of a supply chain, one can achieve an operation that is truly greater than the sum of its parts." Tony Broughton, Managing Director of Supply Chain Squared and guest presenter, will explain what it takes to transform the moving parts of a supply chain into a seamless flow of goods and services that delight customers and create true strategic advantage
