Australia's freight volumes are expected to almost double by 2030 and triple by 2050. The effective movement of goods across multi-leg freight supply chains is therefore critical to Australia's growing economy.

The highly fragmented nature of Australia's transport and logistics industry means the efficiency of the complex logistics flows involving multiple parties are often compromised.

Discover how the new Australian Freight Labelling and Transport EDI Standards released in March 2016 enable business to improve efficiency, interoperability and visibility across the Supply Chain.
