How do you ask questions and make requests of those you lead to enable them to choose to follow you?

Come and share thoughts with Conor O'Malley, leading Executive Coach and Supply Chain Mentor, on how to communicate with curiosity and make effective requests to enable your team "to choose to follow you", rather than "have to follow you".

Conor O'Malley - Principal

Conor is an Executive Coach, Career Coach, Mentor and Leadership Team Developer.

Prior to creating his Coaching Practice, he spent 20+ years working at executive level internationally, with accountability for multimillion $ P&Ls, leading and coaching teams to succeed in the fields of supply chain and general management, as well as executive responsibility in shared services and procurement.

To compliment his executive leadership and operational experience he is –

- A certified Ontological Coach with a Graduate Diploma of Ontological Coaching;
- A Professionally Certified Coach with the International Coaching Federation; and,
- A qualified Mental Health First Aider that helps recognise symptoms of mental health problems and how to provide initial support to those in need.

Finally, about Conor, his purpose in life is 'to be a Beacon for others'.
