Jodie Broadbent

Jodie Broadbent has been involved in the road freight industry since she was a child. Her involvement started with her father, who was a truck driver and then a VicRoads officer. As a teenager, Jodie helped him prepare prosecution briefs for his court appearances, where she learned about evidence and legislation. While holding down a full time role in management at Xerox, then a senior role at Yallourn Open Cut for the Roche Thies, Linfox joint venture, Jodie ran a small business that assisted transport companies become accredited to the NHVAS.

In 2009, Jodie accepted a position at VicRoads as a policy advisor, a year after her father had retired from the organisation. This was followed in 2011 by a role at the Australian Trucking Association in Canberra as a Senior Policy Adviser for David Coonan, one of our industry's most knowledgeable people. In 2012, a promotion saw Jodie and the family head to the Central Coast, where she was the General Manager of what was ATA NSW, where Jodie saw in the name change to Road Freight NSW. After a brief stint with a pharmaceutical company in 2016, Jodie took on the role of National Transport Compliance Manager with Americold, and moved the family back to Melbourne. She is currently completing an MBA in Supply Chain & Logistics, and spends her free time reading and studying leaders like Sheryl Sandberg, Brendon Burchard and Mark Bouris.

JOIN THE DEBATE - Real Experience, Real Issues

This is genuinely a unique event that will challenge your thinking, inspire you into action and assist in making collaborative change.

By attending this event you will be championing diversity and ensuring stronger working relationships between men and women. This is where you can put into practice ideas that will bring immediate economic and social benefits to your organisation. Encouraging diversity in the work place across the country, particularly in non-traditional sectors, while highlighting the need for men and women to support each other through collaboration, is a must. Ask your colleagues to attend so that they too can also participate as well as learn how to facilitate inclusive conversations. Ask the right questions and create action!

Neerja Narayan - Project Manager Asia Pacific, Seqirus Australia

Neerja Narayan has more than 14 years of IT leadership experience with a consistent track record for driving increased levels of productivity and improving customer satisfaction. Through building Project Management Office (PMO) for large and complex programs, Neerja has a deep expertise in Information Technology with domain knowledge in manufacturing, logistics and transportation, education, utilities and pharmaceuticals.

Neerja currently manages complex global programs (UK, USA, Europe, Australia and NZ) and has worked with some of Australia's leading organisations including Compaq, CEVA, Linfox, Bombardier, Toll and Seqirus. Neerja holds a Bachelor's of Engineering in IT and also a Post Graduate Degree in Advance Software Design and Development from the Ministry of IT (Delhi).

Kelly Moy - Recruitment for Supply Chain, Manufacturing and Logistics, Hudson Australia.

Kelly is passionate about Supply Chain and Logistics and is a firm believer in people and skills being the best source of competitive advantage in Supply Chain Management. Using this technical approach, Kelly has been able to develop recruitment solutions to help clients focus on innovation, agility and cost reduction initiatives. With broad networks, Kelly has worked predominantly across supply and demand planning and transport distribution.

Prior to his recruitment career, Kelly worked as a Procurement Specialist (Supply Chain) for Schlumberger Oilfield Services in the UK and USA, with responsibility for planning, procuring and managing inventory (up to $500 million USD) for manufacturing and maintenance worldwide.

In early 2016, Kelly transitioned into the recruitment industry as a specialist consultant for Supply Chain and Logistics at Hudson. In this role, Kelly has focused on recruiting for middle management and high level white collar roles. Kelly is active in the Supply Chain community and assists in the organisation, promotion, and delivery of events.

Jim Mole - Chief Executive Officer, Ameropa

Jim Mole joined Ameropa in 2013 as CEO of a company storing, handling and selling more than one million tonnes of agricultural fertilisers annually. Jim came to Ameropa with significant business leadership experience gained both locally and overseas.

Jim has a proven track record for acquisition integration, strategy development and execution. Jim has also had considerable success effecting major organisational change management and culture development, as well as establishing strong and effective leadership teams and outstanding corporate cultures that foster high performance.

- Order of Australia recipient for Contribution to Development of Supply Chain in Australia (and for contribution to development of Australian Football)

Peter Trahanas - Automotive Industry Leader and Former Director at Globe Motors – Kingdom Saudi Arabia

Peter is a dedicated executive from Australia with significant time spent overseas focused within the Middle East. Most of his adult career has been spent in the Automotive field. As well as the challenges of running a business in the conventional sense, Peter has had to navigate several obstacles including cultures, languages, regional regulations, gender and caste systems just to mention a few. Armed with an acute sense of adventure and the desire to build, he has worked for head offices locally (Australia) at Ford, IVECO and Daimler/Chrysler (including Mercedes).

The highlight of Peter's career has been establishing a new brand from 'concept to working business', both nationally and internationally with Jiangling Isuzu Motor Corporation (JMC) in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia (KSA). Working in a unique blend of a Chinese-American business (JMC based in China) and launching a product in the KSA, has been both extremely challenging and rewarding according to Peter.

Peter holds an MBA from the Royal Melbourne Institute of Technology as well as a solid engineering background in Aviation gained during his time spent in the Royal Australian Air Force.
